Social Work Programmes

Roleplay and practical activities form part of the formal and informal assessment process; thirty skills for practice days and preparation for practice sessions and as such are a mandatory part of the programme.

All students are required to provide written consent, during the formal admissions process, to participate in roleplay and practical activities within their Social Work programme.

As participation is a requirement for successful completion of the programme, any concerns regarding attendance and participation will be raised with your academic advisor at the earliest opportunity.

Please log in to myHub and go to the 'My applications' tab and 'What you need to do' (see example below) to confirm that you have read, understood and will adhere to the roleplay and practical activities at Bournemouth University that are laid out in this document.
